General John S. Williams is now admitted to have the best chance for the Mexican Mission. His competitors General Pierce Young and Hon. Bayless Hanna are now seeking other positions. It is reported that Secretary Manning has decided to permit Mr. Miller, the new Commissioner of Internal Revenue, to make most of the appointments in his burean, but, it is stated, the appointments will not be maile for some time to come. The Court of Appeals has decided in an action instituted on a note executed for the purchase price of lighting rolds manufactured in the State of Illinois and sold by a citizen of that state to a citizen of this State, that the contract is void if the person selling is a peddler without a license.

What the Democrats Want.
It is entirely natural for aspirants for political favor to hear with feelings of consternation of a novement to reduce the number of offices. The chances of applicants to reach the good of their ambition is circanseribed in proportion as the number of offices are diminished. Looking at the matter from an individual stampbint, therefore, the candidates are more than likely to object to the policy adapted by the new administration in cutting off sincerires, and reducing the number of offices as far as the necessities of the public service will permit.

But the public is not to be judged by the temper of the office seekers in this matter or any other. There were nearly for their portion of the people, which is the produced of the public service of the public continues in the other late. The reported by the health board of Mound Smith, and the produced of the public service will permit.

But the public is not to be judged by the temper of the office seekers in this matter or any other. There were nearly for their party services in the matter of any other. There were nearly for their party services in appointments to office. Of this number of offices of the reduction in the manber of places routemplated by the abunitistation. It will thus be seen that the complainers constitute a small population of the people.

What the Democratic people of the country want is not that the administration will continue sincernes in order to provide place for the greatoset possible number of their party associates, but that after the uscless offices are dispensed with the halance he filled with competent, hone-et, and deserving Democratic rown hopes, provided that other Democratic rown hopes, provided the principles the Grace Hawthorne.

The following notice is taken from the the St. Louis Spectator: Miss Grace Hawthorne, the lady in question, had a piendid audience at the People's Theater on Sinday night hast, and she gave them an absolute enjoyment in her delineation of Camille, which was in most respects an original, and therefore interesting conception. From Matilda Heron down Camilles have differed in respects of passion, in shading and coloring, in force and pathos, but there has always been an evenness as regards the emphasis and importance given to certain scenes. In this Miss Hawthorne broke away from the beaten path and isparted to several of the scenes new tuches of pathos and beauty, and did much to stump herself as an intellectual, thinking and original artists. It was in the third act in her pathetic episode with Armand's father that she had conquered her audience. She excited surprise and unstinted praise for the naturalness and depth of her tenderness, and in her pathetic appeals for pity. A great deal of importance was given to the painfully interesting fourth act and thequarer law assusphenemented by a second tableau—interpolated—in which the duel between Armand and DaVarville and the passing the state of the article surprise and unstinted praise for the naturalness and depth of her tenderness, and in her pathetic appeals for pity.
